In Rememberance:

Ran Conev

Club member Ran Coney passed away in late April after a long illness. Ran was, among his many other accomplishments and talents, a frequent windsurfer at Lake Allatoona.

Ran was an artist by recreation and profession and lent his talents to both the club and to its members. Many of you remember the ceramic "half-hull" trophies he made for a regatta a few years back. He never worried about how to "do" something. He found that part easy. The challenge for him was how to add art and beauty to his work.

Fred Dey recalls that Ran told him that he did some tilework and had done the tile for his own kitchen and invited him over to see it. What Ran continued on page 4

"Lanier Rocks"

by our email correspondents

Thursday, April 17 was probably the "big" day of the spring season. The same weather patterns that made this spring consistently breezy (and on weekends, too!) also limited the big thundering cold fronts that deliver those epic days. We had to wait a bit this year but it finally came. The best descriptions of it came from the club's email list, hosted by Josh Hope. These two messages written while the wetsuits were still dripping capture well the fun and grins. Read and enjoy. Also, if you are online but haven't joined the email list, go to the Bulletin Board page on the club web site (http:// www.commandcorp.com/ atlanta.windsurf/) and follow the instructions. # Imperato Speeds to Inland Championship

by Those Who Sailed Slower

Mother Nature blessed us with wind for the first day of our Inland Windsurfing Championships regatta in April. Wind for a regatta is not unusual but when its already been blowing for two straight days (see article on lower left), it usually predestines a visit by that big fat H in the sky- the dreaded high pressure and the resulting dead calm. (It's called a dead calm because all of your continued on page 4

New Dues Plan (Again)

By unanimous (by a two vote margin) vote of the members present at the April meeting, we approved yet another twist in our dues saga. While maintaining the discount offered when paying two years at a time, the club will also offer a 3 month extension to your membership when a new member joins and mentions your name. The restrictions are that you get 3 extensions per year and officers are excepted (otherwise I would have my dues paid through 2036). And remember, pay your second year in advance and you get a 10% discount for that year. (yes, I really know what unanimous means)

It's Teaching Time

May/ June 1997

The Atlanta Boardsailing Club is proud to sponsor another one of its reknown Learn-to-Windsurf Picnics. We will be gathering at Sunrise Cove Park (directions on attached flyer) on June 21 at noon. Bring a friend, coworker or relative and introduce them to the neatest way to get wet. This event is free to club members and $10 for guests. Everyone gets a picnic lunch and guests get not only an introductory lesson and use of equipment but also a 3 month trial club membership.

Ed Marks is coordinating the event and he needs your help. If you would like to help coach sailors on the water, help with the lunch or just like to come out and join the fun give him a call at 404-266-3572 or email edmarks@mindspring.com. If you have a longboard suitable for beginners, especially those wonderful old plastic ones, we need you, too. This is one time that those boards really shine as they are wonderful to teach on. If you plan on bringing a guest, please preregister with Ed so that we can arrange for enough equipment.

Last summer, we had over 40 new sailors come out and it was great. We had fun seeing so many smiling faces and boards on the water. If you enjoy windsurfing, you'll really enjoy sharing it with someone else.

June Meeting

Tuesday, June 10, 7:30 pm at Van Pugh South. Instead of bearing right into Van Pugh at the end of Gaines Ferry, bear left and follow the road to the end. Bring a picnic and your board. This is a great opportunity for newer sailors to bring your stuff and rig it with the assistance of the club's more experienced sailors.

Weather Forecasts on the Internet

by Bert Eskridge, our mole at NOAA

Every twelve hours the National Weather Service gathers data from a world-wide system and runs several numerical models which predict a variety of atmospheric variables. The first model run is a global model which is on a coarse scale (about 5 degrees by 5 degrees and at 30 levels). The output of this model is use to give initial conditions and boundary conditions for the Nested Grid Model (NGM). The NGM is a high resolution model used to predict several atmospheric variables (temperature, humidity, heights of pressure levels, etc.) for the continental US. This is one of the models of interest to windsurfers.

It is difficult to use the NGM predicted fields directly to make weather forecasts. To predict what most people consider weather, the National Weather Service has used several years of NGM predicted atmospheric variables and hourly surface weather observations to developed statistical models to predict wind speed and direction, cloud cover, temperature, and precipitation at each individual weather station. These models are called Model Output Statistics or MOS models.

MOS forecast are available on the internet at the following two sites: (The Purdue site is very busy and you may get a quicker response from the second site.)

 http://wxp.atms.purdue.edu/interact.html
 and
 http://covis.atmos.uiuc.edu/covis/visualizer/fcst_stn.html
 (ed. note: omit the hyphens)

At the Purdue address, you type in the location of choice, in the example below KAVL, Asheville NC, choose MOS, and then get data. The output for Asheville is shown below. Time in these forecasts is given in Universal Time Coordinate or UTC. To get local time subtract four hours from the UTC time during daylight savings time and five hours for standard time.

In item I. below the predicted wind speed (knots) and direction is for a one minute average at the forecast time. Item II. below also says NGM MOS data. However, this is incorrect. It is the direct output of the NGM. The wind speed and direction is a layer average from the surface to about 1000 ft. The wind predicts from the NGM have been found to be too high. They are a good estimation of peak or gusts for the forecast time. The other variables are defined below.

POP12 Probability of receiving at least 0.01 in of precipitation.

COV cloud cover, CLR-clear, SCT-10 to 50%, BRK-60 to 90%, OVC- 90 to 100%

CIL cloud height in 100+s of feet DEW dewpoint (a measure of humidity)

PSL surface pressure

PREC six hour predicted precipitation THK ignore

LI lifted index. Large negative numbers indicate strong thunderstorms.

VERT vertical wind speed. Negative values indicate clear skies, positive values clouds.

Item III. is the MOS forecast from the Medium Range Forecast model (MRF).

This forecast is not as accurate as the NGM MOS for the first 48 hr. Under CLOUDS, WINDS, POP12 are two columns. The first is a prediction of the average value for the 00 to 12 UTC period and the second column is a prediction for the 12 to 24 UTC period. A predicted average wind speed of 12 knots for a 12 hr period means very good winds.

Lanier Rocks from front page to here to share thoughts, questions and comments with other area windsurfers as one message to the list is in turn sent out to the more than 40 subscribers. Oh, and about the headline: While I'll admit to have used the "Rocks" headline before, this is a quote. Hey, it isn't my fault it blew...

''Hello All!

Thought you might enjoy a windsurfing story that may bail you out of your next speeding ticket.

As you know, yesterday the wind really kicked in hard and stayed up all day. There was plenty of jumping action, BIG jumping action, and liquid drag strip speed runs! The temptation was too great, I couldn't stop -- Mark E. (Eberhart), and I sailed 7 hours straight in some of the best conditions ever! Let's just say that I can hardly type this message because I am SO SORE today. On one jump, I landed so hard that I broke my universal joint (the part that holds the sail to the board). I drifted in large behind-the-head-smacking waves for quite a way before another windsurfer, Gregg (Cattanach), spotted my troubles. He sailed in and got a spare u-joint, sailed back out to me, and we replaced the part so I could sail in safely --Thanks Gregg!

On the way home last night (85 South bound) I was so incredibly wasted from windsurfing, that all I could think about was a LONG HOT soak in the jacuzzi, with a glass of milk and a bowl of pasta to recover from the massive beating. I guess with the anxiousness to get home I was "slightly" speeding down the freeway without realizing it. I was traveling at 85 MPH, in the posted 65 MPH zone. I was so tired from sailing that I flew right by a speed trap with out realizing it till I was past it. Yup, I got pulled over.

The police officer said, "I should have guessed you were wearing a wet suit, with all the boards on your truck." I said, "Yup, what an awesome day of sailing -- in fact one of the best days of my life!" I began to tell my windsurfing story, and how great it was -- I couldn't help it. Before I realized it, I was telling the officer all the details of the whole day, and how tired I was, etc., etc.

''I'm not going to ticket you, today's your lucky day!''

Would you believe that the officer said he didn't want to mess up such a good day, and said, "I'm not going to ticket you, today's your lucky day!" WOW, I can't believe it, I got out of getting a ticket because I tell such good windsurfing stories! It is a good thing too, cause I already have three on my record. That ticket could have messed up my car insurance BIG time.

PHEW!

Wow, it's windy today too. To bad I'm so incredibly sore, and have work --else I'd be back at the lake for more windsurfing punishment."

"My goodness - what an insane, crazy, completely awesome sailing day Thursday was! I have to give this long, astonishing, until after-dark session (8 hours) my vote as the peak, tip top, most fun windsurfing day on Lake Lanier I've ever had. Only the couple of days I spent sailing the waves at Florence, Oregon tops it. Thursday was the first time I've ever been able to stay on my sinker board and 5.6 sail for the entire day. Three cheers for relentless wind! I felt like I was in the ocean surf sailing - those rolling, breaking waves were just too much fun! On port tack: slash off the backs, carve on the fronts; what a great day to try out my new wave fin. On starboard tack:

> Jumpable? Absolutely- the yeehaw airtime potential was at an all-time high. Overpowered? You bet! Don't cha just love that feeling of being scared silly of going into your jibe because you just don't think you can handle going one mph faster? Your ankles are screaming "Remember, I CAN break..."

For those of you courageous wind warriors who were there, you understand these sentiments. Glad we could share so much intense fun together! For those of you who were not there - my condolences, and remind me to tell ya about that 20 ft. jump I hit...

See many of you this weekend at the regatta."

Shredley's Believe It or Not!

While we enjoy seeing the scenes of indoor windsurfing events in French arenas, the French did not invent indoor windsurfing. Recent evidence uncovered in Bath, England indicates that the Romans not only used the famous baths there to soak in but also to sail on. Early, crude forms of windsurfers glided across the tepid waters and steamy air. However, the native Angle slaves resented the weary task of waving the wind-generating fans and eventually threw the Romans out of Britain. As the baths fell into disuse and disrepair, this unique form of ancient entertainment fell into obscurity. Believe it or not!

Ran Remembered.. cont'd from front page didn't tell Fred was that the tiles were handcrafted and intricately laid. Fred says it was like Michelangelo saying he painted interiors for a living.

Ran will not only be missed by the local windsurfing community but also by Shell Point were he was a member and good friend. They fondly remember his contributions to their infamous Wind Ceremony.

Ruth, Ran's widow, has asked that any gifts in his memory should be directed to the Cousteau Society or your local chapter of the American Leukemia Foundation.

guest who have driven 6 hours only to see waterski-flat water feel like stringing up the club member in charge of wind).

But this spring's weather pattern which somehow delivered planing conditions most weekends came through again. Not only did Saturday morning bring a breeze but one that you could plane on While the big guys rigged the 9-whatever's, we smaller folk were happy with 7.5s and by the afternoon, even 6.5s were competitive.

Eventual race Alf Imperato set the tone for the day by attempting to loop his 9.5 on a shortboard. While he didn't quite make it (Those guys in the Gorge are rotating 14 ft. of mast. He was trying to get another 3 ft. of mast around on Lanier's flat water.) he definitely showed that the conditions were ripe for speed.

Those of us who attended Randy Somnitz's clinic the night before set sail with the now stylish close-set harness lines (see pg. 6) and ventured forth into the waters of the Chatahootchee. And set forth we did as the race sommittee in an effort to provide a long and competitive course in the open expanse of the main channel exercised our upwind abilities.

Presciently, the first race set the tone as the first five finishers also ended up ranking that way overall at the end. Alf Imperato,a National Team member and recognized teacher, came in first. Randy Somnitz, Olympic hopeful, came in second followed by two more Floridians, Dave Stanger and Lee Huels. Our own Carl Arrigoni placed fifth.

In Sport Fleet, Rod Clevenger and Pat Nugent began their daylong ordeal of trading first and second.

After a lunch break, the fleet sailed out for two more races in a steady breeze. By the third race the wind began to build, assisted by some dark clouds that would eventually bring the day to a close. A number of Atlanta sailors had competitive finishes including Eddie Brodeur Gregg Cattanaach, Dan Burch and Scott Spreen.

In Sport Fleet, Donna Van House, Pat Park and Jack Madden all had good finishes.

Over in the bay, Jamie Park was tearing up the workshop course. We know which fleet he'll be sailing in October! New members Christina Moeller and Jim Reilley were also rounding the buoys.

The rumble of thunder and flash of lightening endouraged us to head in before we replicated Franklin's electical experiment by using our harness hooks instead of the kite and key.

In the evening, we were treated to another Cheryl Zeman signature meal as well as the good company of sailors from all over the East Coast. While this correspondent didn't score any of the door prizes, the beverages and food made up for it.

The dreaded high pressure finally caught up with us Sunday and the conditions were considerably lighter. Kevin Osburn and Dan Burch had great results in the lighter air. Rob Zuill continued to carry Bermuda's hopesas well with consistent sailing. Bert "Why Aren't 11.5's Legal?" Eskridge and Steve Schmidt in Sport Fleet were disproving the notion that you have to be a flea to do well in lighter air. Otherwise the usual suspects were again at the front. The last race was sailed under marginal conditions and the fleet coasted in under a whisper.

Fun was had by all. A lot of work went into making it happen. Alastair Donaldson contributed greatly by stepping into the breach and accepting responsibility for organizing the event. His work was made easier by Chris Voith who had preplanned many of the details despite the fact that Ginny was on bed rest (see pg.7). Jonathan Jewell again supplied killer art work while Cheryl headed up feeding the masses. Scott Spreen (29 Package) provided some of the liquid refreshments. Windsense (Fred Dey) helped out with the always appreciated door prizes. Gregg Cattanach again made sure that everyone had paid up and weighed in before racing and did the scoring.

The race committee led by Tom Turner included Mark Turner, Tap Rinne and Linda Merkle presented us with challenging courses and had to sit on a boat watching us have fun.

Oh, and thanks to everyone who lent a hand in the kitchen-Toni, Deedee, Josh, Laura and others that I'm forgetting and offending.

Also another big thanks to Fred Dey for running the workshop fleet with the able assistance of Dave DeLozier and Phil Duvic. The workshop is a very important part as it introduces new racers properly in a supportive learning environment. Thanks guys.

We should also add that the Shell Point club always makes an effort to support our regatta and they usually arrive in force. Unfortunately, they take a fair number of the trophies with them so we'll have to figure to make them welcome yet keep the silverware on our mantels. Sail faster? Maybe. Or we could enlist the assistance of a former well known figure skater and .....

If you didn't make it to this one, we hope to see you definitely in October.

Reggae Regatta

Some Quick Notes from the Randy Somnitz Clinic

As advertised, Olympic hopeful Randy Somnitz, shared some of his time and expertise Friday night before our regatta. Randy gave us a basic rigging demonstration followed by the good stuff- tips on how to go fast. While we can't recount all the things he said, (Gotta save some for the race course), here are some highlights:

1. When rigging a sail, we all tend to look at the "inside" (the side facing us as we sail) of the sail. Take a moment to look at the other side as that's the one the wind sees. Remember, its the air moving faster over this surface that "pulls" the sail.

2. Most of on the course sail adjustments tend to be done with the outhaul and less with the downhaul than in years past. Flatter for upwind and overpowering

We wuz robbed..... from the front page

Fragakis household had some unexpected and uninvited guests. These guests seemed to enjoy many of our household electric and electronic devices- so much so, that they borrowed many of these items. Permanently. Bummer. Of course, one of the items was the trusty Macintosh computer. Of course, I had no backup disks. My first Mac has been faithfully at its post for 10 years and I always figured that even if the new one crashed, I'd just take it in for service. I guess that assumes that an "it" is around- I had never really thought that my beloved would be kidnapped. Naturally, lots of fun stuff resided on that hard drive. Like the club's mailing list. Ooops. The most annoying part was that I had just finished that morning (our guests dropped by at about 2 in the afternoon) formatting the club membership list for the May newsletter. In another couple of days, I would have sent out 90 backup lists. Darn....

So...Check the mailing label. We've tried to reconstruct things as best we can but we hope we didn't miss any renewals. Also, if a friend complains that the club has stopped sending them mail, let us know. Otherwise, we think conditions. Fuller (less) for reaches, runs and lighter air.

3. Mast track all the way forward in nonplaning and upwind legs. All the way back in planing (or as much as you can for the heavier sailors).

4. The better racers are now sailing with their harness lines set within inches of each other, if not almost touching. This gives more leverage and mobility in adjusting sail trim.

5. Most of pumping, especially upwind, is done with the shoulders and not the arms. The idea isn't to flounder wildly but to get the leach (back edge of the sail) to move rhythmically in and out.

6. Unlike slalom boards, longboards usually have the booms set higher (eye level or slightly above). This enables you to hang more weight on the rig (and down on the mast base). It also facillitates pumping.

everything is patched back together. By the way, our visitors concentrated almost entirely on things with power cords so we're all okay. Thanks for asking. (Yeah, I know. All the women members were worried about my family. The guys were all wondering just about my windsurfing gear. )

While we are working on the crime report, Bruce Harris lost a couple of rigs on a recent Hatteras trip. They were taken from the lawn of the house he was visiting. The local constabulary suspects organized rings from the Northeast as this happens from time to time. Bruce says that only new undamaged stuff went missing. I guess a bit of prophylactic action would be to go ahead and put that harness hook through your new monofilm. That modish look of wads of packing tape applied like a kindergarten art project may be what it takes to encourage a thief to look elsewhere Mark Eberhart- all your gear is safe! (ed. note: Mark has broken or punctured all his stuff at least once). While we say this in part with a sly grin, urban bike messengers have for years defaced the cosmetics of their trusty steeds for just this purpose.

A Side note for all you gear hounds.

The manufacturers hate it when this happens. First over all in the April regatta was taken, not surprisingly, by a gifted competitor sailing an expensive longboard and a 9.5 sail. "Of course," you say. Note that 2-4 were taken by sailors on 7.5s and that 2 and 4 were those old "obsolete" IMCOs- an 8 yr. old sail and board design. Annoying isn't it? Yeah, the sailors were good, very good (okay, VERY good); but, it shows that going fast is more than just running up the credit card. I must admit though, its easier to try to purchase results with new stuff than go out and try 60 jibes in a row.... I'd be a hypocrite to suggest otherwise- I personally got Alf Imperato's advice on faster fins. Newer, longer fin. Yeah, that's the ticket. And those new Aerotechs sure look fast, too.....hmmm.

Many thanks!

Two publications have been kind enough to send along free issues to get us stoked and support the sport. A hearty thank you to both WindTracks and Windsurfing. We enjoy them both even when we already have subscriptions. Both mags are doing a fine job with their particular focus and we appreciate their support of the club.

The Survey Says ..

by Ed Marks, Ph.D., Professor of Windsurfing Behavior, Flowery Branch College

Sixteen club members responded to our Member Profile survey. which represents 19% of the members. The results were tabulated by the Division of Sampling and Statistical Analysis of Zephyr Consulting, who calculated the sampling error to be 500% (In their words,"the results don't mean diddley!"). However, in respect to those who took the time and effort to complete the survey, we will present the results as if they mean something. In fact, the club officers will take the recommendations into a closed door session to establish a new charter for the club to make sure at least these members remain happy.

For the most part, people responding to the survey are an experienced group of sailors (i.e. the same folks that typically are active in the club). On average, they've been in the club for at least 5 years, own their own equipment (most more than one board), sail using their harness and footstraps, and can waterstart. Almost all sail at Lake Lanier, and travel as well, while many are also into racing. However, only half read the questions before answering them (so either to sail well its better to not read the instructions and just do it; or, they were answering other questions and probably can't sail that well) Many have attended a clinic, but few are planing to. Most go to meetings, and as many have access to the Internet as can waterstart (so if you want to make it over that final hurdle to waterstarting, get on the Internet!). Very few sail only when its warm, while slightly more have sailed au natural (weill hope this was when it was warm). Slightly over half have a significant other who sails too, and half have sailed in the dark (I do that too, but most people say it's light out).

Finally, three-quarters of the respondents were afraid of the voodoo priestess sticking sharpened battens through replicas of their boards. But obviously the other 80% of the club members who didn't respond at all didn't care a bit about the priestess, so we can assume that those who responded are quite a superstitious group.

The opinions given in the survey suggest that people are happy with the club, and would even recommend it to a friend. People were fairly neutral about club meetings, and planning more trips. Not surprisingly, those responding said they dont hate surveys, while those who do hate them showed their distaste by not doing it at all!

So, why do people join the club, and what do they want out of it? Most members seemed to join for a variety of reasons that boil down to the fact that "I joined because it was there." Quite a few joined to party (because they had no social life), while a few others joined because their spouse made them (that's right, get them to go talk about windsurfing somewhere else for a while!). Next year, members want to party and have clinics, while they don't want to take part in bitching sessions. Almost everyone loves the humor in the newsletter, and a few suggested it would be better if there were coupons for cheap equipment or $20 bills inside. Some suggested that an excellent service the club could provide would be to rig members equipment at Van Pugh (any volunteers?).

Finally, we asked members what they like to do besides sail. The group is quite athletic, with interests ranging from cycling to skiing to roller blading, scuba, and hang gliding. I feel compelled however, to warn you that one club member's favorite activity is driving fast up Georgia 400 with his eyes closed. We are notifying the highway patrol to be on the lookout, but until this kamikaze is stopped, I suggest that you make you approach to Lake Lanier from the east.

So, after all this work, what did we really find out about club members as a result of this survey?

THEY DON'T LIKE SURVEYS!

We are delighted to announce the birth of our son Thomas Christopher Voith, Jr. "Christopher" Born April 16, 1997 12:56 a.m. Four pounds fifteen ounces. Eighteen and one half inches.

It's Easy! Saturday June 21st* Learn to Windsurf!

You've seen it, you might have even tried it. Maybe you thought "That's too hard". It's not so! Almost anybody can learn to windsurf (and it may be the most fun you ever had with your pants on). It just takes a little help from somebody that knows what they're doing, to be up and sailing.

This is your chance! Your introductory lesson starts on a dry-land simulator with a certified instructor to show you how to uphaul the sail, steer a course, turn around and sail back. Then you'll pair up with an experienced sailor for some individual instruction on the water. In a short time you will master the basics and be sailing on your own. The cost is only $10 and includes a 3 month trial membership in the Atlanta Boardsailing Club and a picnic lunch.

All equipment is provided. All you'll need is a bathing suit, some "Aquasocks" (or canvas tennis shoes) and a willingness to get wet & have fun. Bring a picnic, bring a friend and spend the day with The Atlanta Boardsailing Club learning to windsurf. We'll start at noon on Saturday, June 21st. Space will be limited so please call to let us know to expect you.
