“Adopt a Weekend” Postponed 2 Weeks: June 19th is New Date

Because of some logistic complications at the last minute, the Allatoona Adopt a Weekend is being rescheduled for Saturday, 19th. This will allow for a few local Windgliders to return from their annual Hatteras sojourn. Randy Falkenberg invites you to join him on the new day.

Again.....

Bring your board, kids, spouse or friends and be ready for some light wind sailing and fun at Galts Ferry (Allatoona), 1 PM to ??? Sat. June 19th. Windgliders or big fun boards especially requested. Teaching your kids how sail or get an old friend back on the water, water tag, or "bumper boards" are all possibilities. Food, goodies and refreshments provided. Contact host Randy Falkenberg for more details. (770-379-0505 or by email randacf@aol.com.)

If you'd like to host your own weekend, contact Ed Marks at 404-266-3572 or email him at edmarks@mind-spring.com.

Learn to Sail Program Coming This Summer

After an acrimonious debate, the consensus at the last meeting was to change the annual Learn to Sail Clinic to a Program consisting of monthly lessons from late June to August. The previously congenial meeting turned acrid after the webmaster, in a fit of ill-temper, suggested that the Learn to Sail Clinics contributed very little in the way of new members to the club and personally, considering the high cost of replacing his IMCO fin after each clinic, he'd just as soon send that money to the club treasury. After some discussion, it was suggested that a bit of repetition would allow the new sailors to hone their skills and improve their chances of remaining windsurfers by the end of the program. Also, it was approved that the program tuition should include a full year's membership as opposed to the trial membership of prior years.

The motion passed with the amendment that the webmaster be banned from the next meeting which is okay by him as he intends to be in Hatteras then.

For more information or to preregister, contact Chris Pyron 404-784-0287.

If you would like to help, teach or whatever else might help a newbie, contact G.T. Brown at (678) 945-4343.

For complete details see page 5. If you'd like, copy the notice and post it at your work, school etc.

Fun with Physics Dept. Why You Can't Plane in August

Why do we windsurf in January? It's like the old joke about why dogs, um, "clean" themselves: Because we can. Well, why don't we windsurf in August? Because we can't- usually. The principal reason is that August just isn't very windy. A large high pressure settles over the Southeast and we get the endless days of highs in the 90s, lows in the lower 70s with a chance of afternoon or evening thundershowers.

Another reason is that wind is generally caused by air temperature differences- the warmer air will rise and cooler air will move (blow) to take its place. And when it's 90° in Atlanta and 90° in Helena, MT and 90° in Miami, you won't get much air movement.

A third reason is that warm air, being thinner, just doesn't give you as much power. Several months ago, Guven Kais posted on the internet some figures that relate the difference in lift between 5°C. and 30° C. For larger sail sizes in moderate wind (12 knts) you need an extra half square meter of sail to get the same power- about a 9% difference.

So that 7.5<sup>2</sup> m. sail that worked so well in February has now shrunk to a 7.0. Not a big difference but since we only get the most modest of breezes here this time of year, it only adds insult to injury.

Short of having a thermally adjusting quiver (first, there was twist, now, expansion!), there isn't much you can do. Except wait for those first cool breezes of autumn to swell you quiver back up to size.

A last thought: when someone says they were sailing a 4.5 in Maui/Aruba, you can now proudly say, but I sailed a 4.5 in Atlanta in January- it was REALLY blowing then!

Learn to Windsurf !

You've seen it, you might have even tried it. Maybe you thought "That's too hard". It's not so! Almost anybody can learn to windsurf ). It just takes a bit of proper instruction, to be up and sailing. This is your chance with our 3 monthly session program.

Your introductory course starts on a dry-land simulator with a certified instructor to show you how to uphaul the sail, steer a course, turn around and sail back. Then you'll pair up with an experienced sailor for some individual instruction on the water. Over the course of the 3 clinic program you will master the basics and be sailing on your own. The cost is only $30 and includes a one year membership in the Atlanta Boardsailing Club.

All equipment is provided. All you'll need is a bathing suit, some "Aquasocks" (or canvas tennis shoes) and a willingness to get wet & have fun. Bring a picnic, bring a friend and spend the day with The Atlanta Boardsailing Club learning to windsurf. We'll provide snacks. We'll start at 11 am on Saturday, July 17th. Subsequent sessions will be on August 21 and September 18. Space will be limited so please call to let us know to expect you. If you already are a beginner, you, too are invited to sharpen your skills.

A Picture is Worth a Thousand Windsurfing Lessons

by Ed Marks

Reading windsurfing magazine instructional articles have been very helpful to me in improving my sailing skills. But given that most of the magazines are filled with ads, lifestyle articles, race stories, etc., rather than instructional tips, I decided to see what more I could learn to improve my sailing by browsing the pictures of the pros and advertisements. As I did, I tried to figure out what it is that would make me a better windsurfer, and I came to the following conclusions:

I will windsurf better if I:

- Stick my tongue out more both when I'm sailing or just hanging out with friends. (I guess Michael Jordan would be a great windsurfer if he tried it). I actually tried it once. Lake Lanier really doesn't taste that good; which leads me to-
- Learn to make ugly faces, especially with my mouth wide open and getting my eyeballs to look like they'll pop out (this is on the beach, not while at the apex of a 20 foot high jump). I guess drinking a quart each day of the Columbia River or Pamlico Sound will do this to you.
- Make strange gestures with my arms and hands, like I'm putting a hex on someone, when I'm not sailing. I've been told that this may be the South Seas equivalent of the peace sign but the only time I've seen it in real life, I got wiped out by the first set of waves after my beach start. Perhaps not unheard of at Hatteras but this was on Lake Allatoona.

- Wear duct tape for any sort of medical dressing. If I am between rolls, I should simply smile at the camera while showing the ligaments, tendons and muscles of my hands peering through my torn calluses. Pros either never get calluses or they wear 3 rolls of duct tape; there is no in-between. I guess once that big callus starts to go, it gets ugly fast.
- Wear tie-dyed clothes, or imitations thereof. I guess if I just freely mix and match colors and whites when doing the wash, toss them all in hot water and tumble dry, that'll leave more time for me to perfect my flawed back loop.
- Stop wearing booties. Wearing them must be why I slip off the board so often and why the pros don't wear them. I guess if I do bang a toe, then I can make faces on the beach, too (see above).
- Have pictures of naked women hanging on my wall at home or get a beautiful woman wearing a thong bikini to sit on the beach while I sail. Pros apparently never go out for a sail unless a lovely young lass is lounging in the foreground. I'm sure that my wife will understand.
- Grow my hair longer or shave it all off. Either way, it seems as though a comb is optional. Shampoo is, too. No wonder the pros have so much money for trips to exotic locales.
- Learn to lean my head back while smiling for those mast-top camera mount photo opportunities. Question: Do the pros suffer repetitive stress syndrome in their necks from doing this so much? More questions: Where can I buy a mast with a camera attached to the top? Do they cost much? Are they compatible with the new no-cam sails? Have you read any good reviews of them? Will I plane sooner with a camera at my masthead? Will I plane sooner with my head leaning back? Do these people usually sail looking up at the sky? Isn't that dangerous to other windsurfers around them? What if you looked up and saw a seagull, a busy seagull? Would you still have to smile for the camera?

- Learn to spin on my head. This doesn't seem important but I saw somebody in a magazine doing it once. They were in the magazine. They must be good. I've never been in a magazine. I guess I better learn how to spin. On my head.
- Sacrifice my body to Jaws. Nothing is more familiar to my windsurfing experience than someone sailing for their life while 200 tons of water threatens to obliterate them. With all those quiet days on the lake, I can relate to that. Fully. Entirely. I feel like another brother of the sea everytime I look at those photos.
- Sleep less and drink and party more. The next time I go to Lanier I really must try this. Party in Buckhead till 4 am and be at the gates of Van Pugh at 5:30 am. I'm sure I'll throw my first loop. Well, I'm sure I'll throw something.

There lies such a wealth of knowledge in those photos. I see a breeze stirring the tops of the trees. Excuse me while I grab a magazine and start practicing those poses!
